OUR LONDON LETTER.

What a President of Stratford Knew About Skakespeare.

The Theatrical Sensation of London-Row Nadjoska was Received by the Theater Cpers --

(Correspondence of The Sunday Oregonian ) London, January 1, 1838.—There are some people who, wherever they are, always live outside the world. There are contented, ignorant persons in England who go through their daily routine by work and rest on Sundays without routine by work and rest on Sundays without thinking of anything beyond. I can give you a very remarkable example of this. The stary was nariated o me not long since by Mr. Henry Irving. He and his friend, Mr. J. L. Toole, the comediag, were spending a quiet day together at Stratford-on-Avon, the birthplace of Shakespeare. It was a calm, sunny summer day, and the general dinner hour of he working man. On the outskirts of the town they came upon a group of two or three laborers who had eaten their midday meal and were smoking their their midday meal and were smoking their pipes. They were evidently natives of the fanous old lown. Tools, in the way of anneament and study of character, is well known for his pleasant capacity of "drawing people out." "Is this the way into Stratford?" saked Tools. "Yes," said the evident boss of the industrial roup group "Do you live at Stratford"

"Yes," was the reply, given in a lazy manner and without even a glance at the questioner.
"Oh, then you know all about it and can tell

"On, then you know an anoth it and can the ge what we want to know"

The laborer smoked on with calm indifference, so also did his companions "Shakespeare lived here, eh""

"Who?"

"Shakespeane."

"Yes."

"Did you know hun"

"No"
"Is he living still."
"Is he living still."
"Dunn: think he's dead"
He now turned to his metes and they nodded,
as much as to say that was so.

"YES, RE'S DEAD "

"Many people come to see It?" bis lip and an extra pull at his pipe "You ever seen it?"
"I live here."

"I mean ever been inside it" '
"Not I."

"Not know better?"
"Sould think I do

The boss nodded.
Thank you," and Toole taking out his purse,
"you woult object to my standing you a drink";
"You woult object to my standing you a drink";

"No"
"There you are, then"
A Lorny band was held out and in passed the

"Go and got half a gallon."
The make sauntered away acr The mate sauntered away across some fields, a short on to the town, and the boss became a triffs more communicative.

"But what was he ramous for" maked Toole.
"Write", hald the native with a sudden gleam of intelligence.
"Ch, writing," rejained Irving, "did he write for the newspapers."

No."

"For magazines" asked Toole

"No" I Londe: Journal" suggested Irving "I or Londe: Journal" suggested Irving "Het per s Magazine" asked Thole "Het per s Magazine" was again the laconic reply, but this time the native paused, and looking round as it he had sucdenly rembered, said with an evident gieam of knowledge, "I think he writ for bible."

I old Roseberry told a friend of mine yesterday that he is in favor of home rule and an Irish parliament under proper imperial guarances. The latest book onthe subject is by Mr. Jelus, harrister-al-law, who gives a very complete history of the question and argues ugalest any stragtural interference with the union. Mr. seans is a racked, and, oildly enough, some of the most sugrous opponents of home rule are indicals of the most pronounced type. An frishman of intell general informs me that if England does not agree to restore the Irish parliament in 19th in the I nated 52 tee will interface another I is me rule and an Irish parliament the north will resist and there will be civil war an Irish Irish and lates and the civil mar an Irish is a bloody wir of race and religion? have insisted that there was "a nigger in the ce." People remind each other that in early and nituential. Certain political cliques posand fittential. Certain pointest cieques pos-sessing weighty influence in territorial affairs devised and advanced measures infinical to the influence of true patriotism and loyalty to the United States government. As is mentioned in an ar-ticle beretofare printed in these columns, enti-tled "Cost of an Indian War," it is maintained by many people, some of whom occupied high official position, that the courseof the erritorial government was on many occasions influenced by the hope and expectation of obtaining money from the United States treasury,—a hope which had its inception in the prompt payment by the general government of the claims which grew out of the Rogue river Indian war of 1453. This class of reasoners say that the lerit vial authyrities, seconded by public opinion through-out Origon, had adopted a policy of Indian fighting for the purpose of running up accounts for the general government to seltle. It was, then for the purpose of extending the benefits to be derived from the forthcoming Indian war that the Salem statesmen, called into the field ten companies instead of four, giving thereby, in the language of the era, seing weighty influence in territorial affairs

To publish the whole truth, say the doings of the swerral sects of missionaries, the true cause of the murder of Dr. Whitman and the abuse of 1r Mc1 oughlin, are proper matter for history but would not be likely to meet with favor. I would be glad to give you any assistance in my litwer, but don't know how to do it without seeing you and tailing over the sifiarrs of the provisional government and incidents occurring in the early settlement of Oregon. There seems to be quite an interest taken in that subject. I have been frequently solicited to write on it to the papers, and have written several rather amusing pieces. I sent a copy of the "Blue high" story to J. L. Parrish, he being one of the party that went to Astoria in the spring of 1845. It is a true story, and baused much amusement in Samla Rosa. They call out grap-brindly "blue ruin" ever since. I have one of my stories left, which I send you with this. I have well to profit by my experience. The times and incidents in Oregon occupy to considerable part of it. I have it in my own writing in book. As I have not thought of publishing it, my children may do what they like with it wheal I am gone.

THE SITUATION AT PORTLAND

= PORTLAN > 81 VD 11, JAN 31 1886

Reyond all question it is true, as the letter of "Ixion" states it, that there is an insensibility on the part of the wealth of Portland to its oppor unities, duties and obligations, and cous > to make a progressive city. Of these conditions sets CARROVIAN lies often made compilate. It quight to be understood by those who own it e property and control the wealth of Portland that affeirs in the Northwest have now reached a shape of progress that makes the future of Portland damand as course before on the same. Portland depend, as never before, on the sagaeffs, energy and enterprise of its own cilizens. Hitherto Port and has made no effort. The city has grown steadily, though slowly, for thirty-five years, because it couldn't help it. There and active rivalry anywhere in the Northwest the wind distinct a fortland. But the time is now at hand when an active and enter-prising public spirit is necessary. Without it there will be, first, a standing still, and then re-

Is Portland to be at the head of the activities of the Northwest? This is the question. The Northwest is destined soon to develop great activities, and if Portland does not place nature, and a fortune does not passe service at the head of them, some other city will This may as well be set down as a fact. It must be said, though regretfully, that there is almost no public spirit here And it must also be said that unions his public spirit be developed, this city will not hold its own in the race for supremacy, BI the weath of Portland cannot be made to recitize its ob igations, it certainty will be made sereible, in time, through individual and private lemes, of un reproved opportunities For these Portland, with their buildings that bring high rents, will not always be valuable as now, unless means are taken to place Portland at the head of the activities of the cribwest, now to be developed, and to keep At Portland there is ample concer try in the new lines of progres which the new time is about to bring th) most part it is utterly invensible to its adth) heat fait is during and obligations. It is inactive, lethargic and unanterprising. It sits still, upon the sluggish habits acquired dur ing a third of a century e reason why one place goes shead of an other is almost always largely due to supedior enterprise ob the part of the successful city. It may just us well be said in plain terms, for it is the truth, that if Pertland does not wake up to tto requirements of the time and the situation, her supersedure in leadership of the activities, commercial and industrial, of the Northwest, is inevitable Relatively she will first fall bel and then she will dwindle and decay. There will be no help for it. There is no magic in her name or position. (these are created not by naturalous interposition, but by human means. It should be the study of those who represent the wealth of Portland to take the lead in developing the coming activities of the Northwest. For if Port and does not make herself the head and center of these activities some other place undenbtedly will. There must be an awakening in Portland, or the opportunity will be les ntration of energy in Portland and ridle of energy from Portland are alike neger-

The Olympian's Trip with 200 Fassengers

A trip by river to the Cascades at any season of the year in almost any sort of a steam craft, provided one has good company, is full of enjoyment. But when you add to the ordinary pleasures of a trip the novelty of ploughing through fields of ice, the excitement which any chance of danger kindles, the little uncertainty of being able to get to your destination, the comfort of the finest steamer in Pacific const waters, and in the end find yourself safe and sound on terra firms, you have gone through no waters, and is the end find yourself safe and spund on terra firms, you have gone through no commorphize journey. Such was the experience of the two hundred people who left here Iriday morning for the Rast by the Oregon Railway & Navigation company's steamer Olympian, the first passengers from Portland for a week. Warm weather and rams the night before had started all the govers, and the steamer had no such struggle to get up as she had Wednesday. She passed through considerable tonting ice below Vancouver and struck reveral good-sized patches fatther up but met. Add McCracken, Mise Wision and Mise Tipic, and Mestra. Free M. (chinors, John Zilloger, Oliver Cole, Edward Adams, W. J. Burgs and W. Ott.

A trip to the Cascades in warm weather is de inglated. The writer this gone up by boat per heps twenty times always in summer, and in agined that each succeeding trip was finer than any other. Now he is of the opinion that ther oughly to enjoy the scenery of the Columbariver, one must see it very soon after a heavy good has beginn to melt. Cape Horn never before looked so beautifut. Instead of five or six simple the control of the control of the palesades, and more than a least the representation of any of the palesades, and more than top a quarter of a mule high. The sleamer did not move through the lees faster than a man count wait, and every one had more than the usual opportunity of studying cape Horn—in the opinion of many, the mest but of scenery on the river. Unlike in summer, the rocks above the perpendicular bluff were covered with green moss, heightening the effect wonderfully. On the Oregon shore the falls were almost in numerable. Where one is seen in summer ten are visible now. Below Multinomah falls there is a falls nearly 38, high land, caming mass. Solo lines and the search of t is a falls nearly as high and comming nearly much water as Multnomah falls does in summer
